

The diagnosis of dementia is entering a new phase. The conventional diagnosis is based on structural and functional images, but now it is possible to make a diagnosis using pathological images, cerebrospinal fluid biomarkers, and blood biomarkers. In this symposium, we will hear lectures by leading doctors from around the world on not only body fluid biomarkers, but also on digital biomarkers using digital technology.